

Fair Tide expands services to city

Saturday, September 26, 2009

Rochester — Kittery-based nonprofit Fair Tide has recently expanded its services to provide comprehensive support services to 12 formerly homeless families in Rochester in partnership with affordable housing developer, The Housing Partnership.

Noting the expansion is consistent with its recently implemented three-year strategic plan, Fair Tide's Executive Director Joe Galli is excited about the collaboration with THP.

"It speaks volumes to both of our organizations, because a lot of planning went into this," said Galli. "Hopefully, this is the beginning of a long and fruitful partnership."

According to Galli, the mission of Fair Tide is to assist these families in becoming self-sufficient with targeted services that include education, life-coaching, and individual and group counseling.

"We address all the factors -from their emotional stability to how they budget their finances," he said. "The result is that they can lead a better quality of life as active members of their community."
